The perfect London apartment for the art collector by Tomeef Design

In an 1850s building in Chelsea, southwest London, an apartment stands out not only for its strategic location, but for its design elements that are perfect for art collectors too.

When Italian art collector Umberta Gnotti Beretta bought her London apartment, she teamed up with international architecture and interior design studio Tomèf, founded by Tommaso Franchi, to redesign the space into a functional apartment for her family that reflects their love of art and design.

Tomev's studio reconfigured the interiors, and the result is a comfortable and refined space, with elements of English style but also reflective of Beretta's Italian roots and way of life.

The apartment is filled with light and Tomev took it as a starting point for the design, reinventing the interior spaces to create a welcoming and spacious feel. "Although it's a small apartment, creating a larger foyer made it feel more spacious than it is and allowed us to separate the private bedroom areas from the public living areas," Tommaso says.

The interior views of this penthouse in Chelsea, London may be better than the exterior views available, if only because every corner here has been designed with a focus on art.

custom designs

The living room's color palette is inspired by Flora Yuknovitch's art, which hangs atop an undulating carved mantel that Tomev designed specifically for the space. The fireplace was located far from the center of the room—a common problem in London—but Tommaso redesigned it asymmetrically to hide the imbalance and make it appear deliberate.

The fireplace is hand-carved from a single piece of Carrara marble, reflecting the family's Italian heritage. Umberta was keen to breathe new life into an old pair of sofas (<https://www.rrarabia.com/ar/shelter/design/ /D8/A3/D8/B1/D8/A7/D8/A6/D9/83- /D9/81/D8/B1/D9/8A/D8/AF/D8/A9>) she owned, so she had them reupholstered in Dedar silk velvet

The entrance to the apartment is also graced by a custom-made chandelier from Nilofar Gallery in Milan, suspended above a custom-made table by artisans in France with two 1950s chairs from Dorian Caffot de Fawes and complemented by brass candelabra from Gong

As for the dominant theme in the master bedroom, Tommaso defined it with monochromatic wallpaper from Pierre Frey. Above the bed, an Andy Warhol artwork nods to the family's manufacturing background, while two paintings by Andrea Encontre by Le Tipe Umame flank the door to the bathroom.

The luxurious Art Deco-inspired bathroom combines three different types of monochromatic black, pink, and beige marble with brass inlays, all custom designed by Tomef

Tommaso Franchi says of the design: "Our work at Tomive is about achieving balance. We are like the conductors of an orchestra, combining many different elements, each beautiful on its own but even more beautiful when carefully combined with others. In this apartment we have incorporated antiques With contemporary elements. The apartment

"is small but luxurious; it's functional but also comfortable and aesthetically inspiring
